EMPLOYMENT LAW IN A NUTSHELL

Employment law is a complex subject and all those with managerial responsibility must have a basic understanding of the law. This popular one-day course has been running for over ten years, giving both HR and non-HR professionals alike a detailed overview of employment law and what it means in practice.

PROGRAMME AIMS AND BENEFITS

Employment contracts, discipline, sex, race, age and disability discrimination together with employee rights and health and safety responsibilities represent the core areas where the law affects the work of human resources professionals and line managers alike.

This one-day programme will provide you with a working knowledge of the essential areas of employment law you need for your business to ensure it is adequately protected.

With so many changes in employment law, keeping in touch with these core areas of risk is now more important than ever.

TRAINERS

Mary Clarke Consultant, Employment Law, DLA Piper
Mary acts as senior adviser for several major employers on all aspects of employment law. She specialises in employment contract variations and workforce involvement, TUPE transfers and discrimination issues. She regularly conducts in-company training programmes for HR, line and operational management and is a very experienced employment law trainer.

Elizabeth Miller Consultant, DLA Piper
Elizabeth qualified as a lawyer in 2001. She was a lawyer with DLA Piper until 2005. Elizabeth has lectured for John Moores University and is a regular trainer for Advance external and in-company training courses.

Carlene Nicol Associate, DLA Piper
